

Political Science IV (Political Organization)

---

Political Organization

---

It is any organization that involves itself in the political process, including political parties, NGOs, and special interest advocacy groups.

Which organization are engaged in political activities. Such as lobbying, community organizing, campaign advertising etc.

Political organization involves giving form to politics. Giving form to politics involves coordinating demands and strategizing to produce real change.

Political organization refers to the way power is distributed and embedded in societies.

Who has power

How does power differ from authority

How is power organized and administered

---

---

How is order maintained

How is conflict organized

What is purpose of government

Do we need a government to function as a society

Learning Objectives

---

The main object of this paper is to know and learn organs of government

It also studies major constitutions like USA, UK and India by adopting comparative approach

The constitutional and legal provisions, the institutional arrangement and their political background are to be explained, analyzed and evaluated

The comparative perspective enables us to understand the differences and similarities between various constitutional arrangements.

Furthermore the political institutions are to be studied in light of political process to gain an understanding of dynamics of ACTUAL POLITICS AND POLICY MAKING

---

---

---

